CHELTENHAM
HIGH SCHOOL

1973

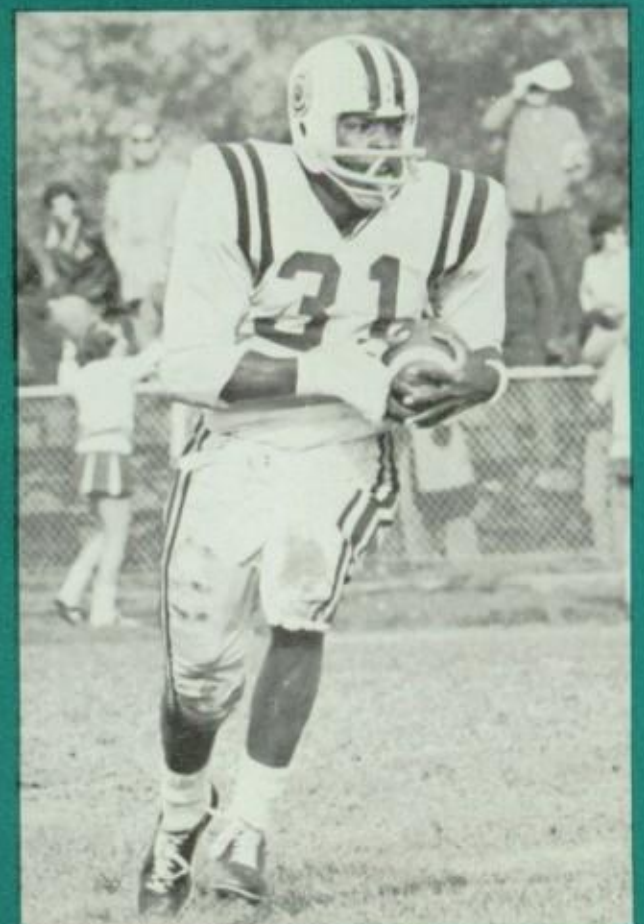

WYNCOTE,
PENNSYLVANIA

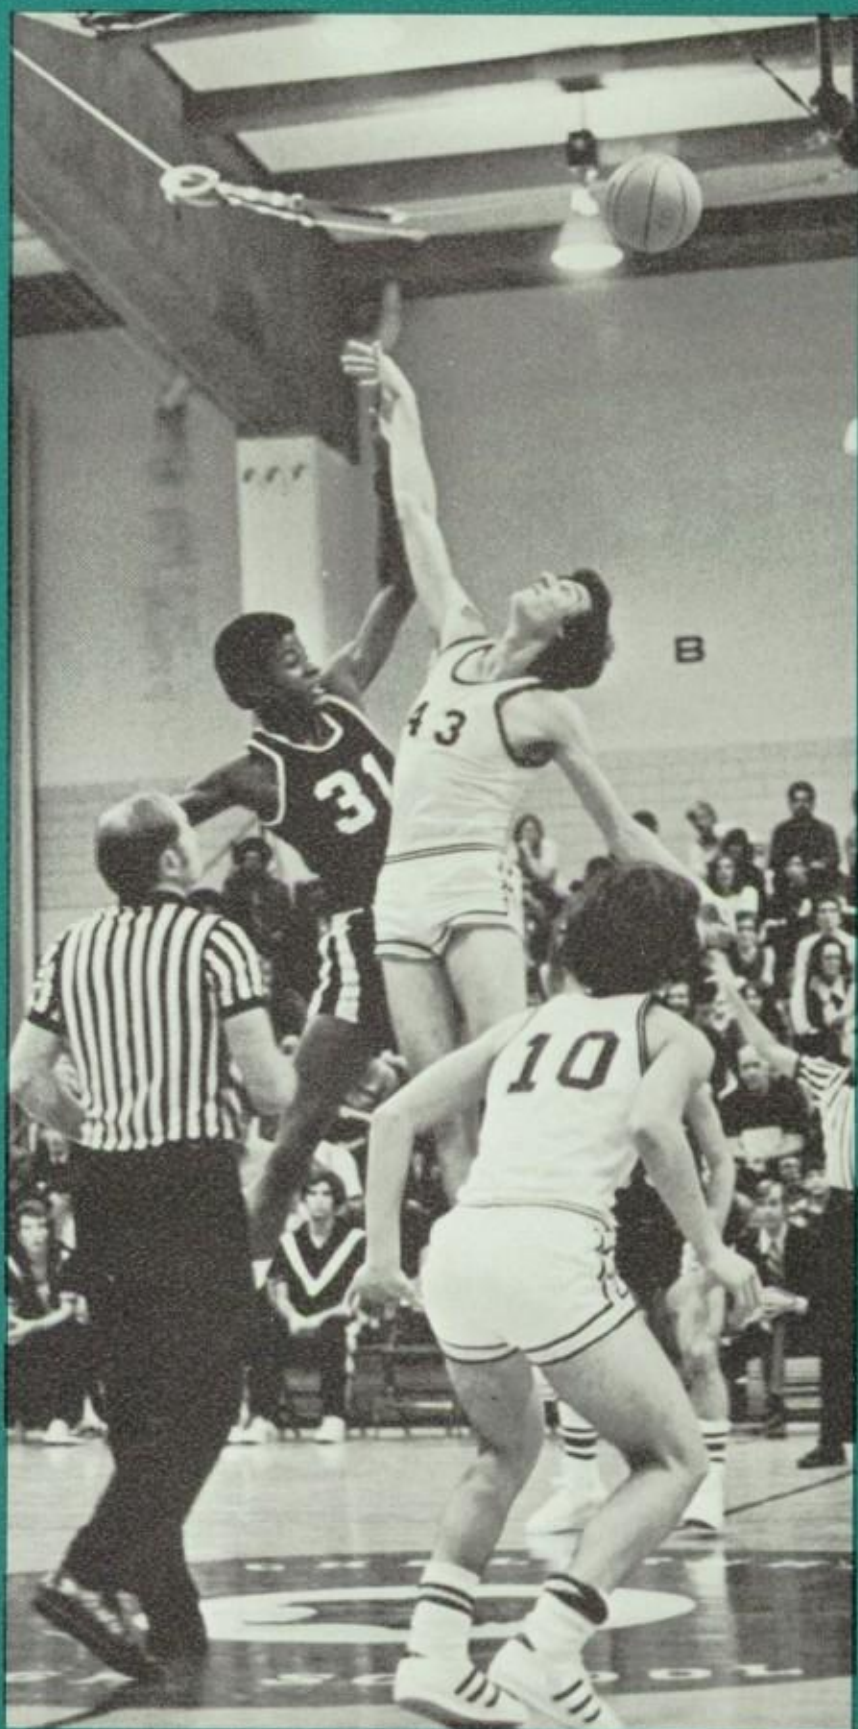

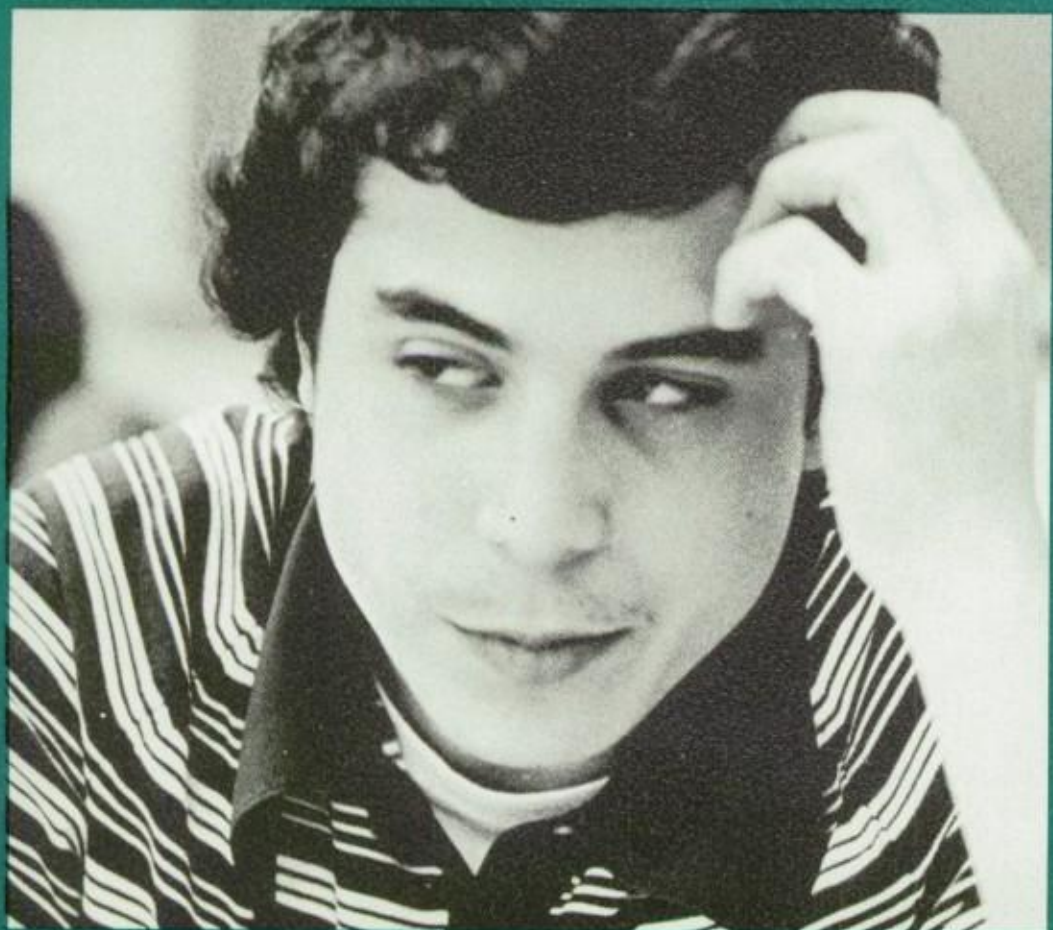

What with college, classes, cuts,
At CHS you choose your way.
Unless, of course, we're all in ruts:
Following Fortune day by day.
Whatever the case, we bring to you
These shots of school: to laugh, to view.

The 1973 El Delator is Fate and Fate is Cheltenham High School. We've come a long way from "superstitions" to "modern sciences," but it looks as if we can finally choose our own futures. Maybe.

The Greeks had a word for it—the Moerae. These three women would weave and cut a man's life, leaving little room for arguing, as the harsh Hellenic world held no place for either-or. The Fates controlled our destiny and that was that.

Bible times provided an escape clause from the omnipresent doom of the Greeks: a man could save himself from eternal damnation by following the word of God. Even this was a little difficult for most to swallow and the outlook was still pretty bleak for the average fellow.

It took the Renaissance and Machiavelli to issue the post-Rome definitive decision on Man's fate: according to Niccolo, Man controlled one-half of his future; the other half belonged to Destiny.

With the eras of Enlightenment and Revolution, mankind had swung full circle from its Grecian beliefs. Eighteenth and nineteenth century Man felt not only that he could control his destiny but also that it was his duty to do so. American capitalism of the late nineteenth century was the zenith of western civilization's optimistic views of itself and its course.

The drawn-out destruction of World War I ended those dreams forever. Until rather recently, we've lived in a world of pessimism and little, if any, hope. Only within the past few years have people again awakened to the possibilities within themselves. We, therefore, dedicate this yearbook not just to what Man has been and what he is, but to what he might be. Good luck, world.

To Seniors and fellow readers: Greetings!
What you are now perusing is some very blank verse penned some forty days ago by the Editor-in-Chief of this yearbook.
It is the only "long" literature enclosed; should you wish to skip it, please turn the page. However, I warn you: this is the end of the book.

About 178 pages ago, I told you that the theme of this yearbook is Fate. Now, four months later, I would like to stuff your minds
with yet another of those informative quotes,

"To hell with Fate!" (Vladimir Ilyich Viganov)

I reason thusly:
Anyone who thinks that any CHS yearbook has had or can have a theme is wrong.
Let us be frank, dear friends.
The annual is nothing more than paper with pretty pictures upon it.
Hopefully, of you.
The theme is merely an excuse to tie it all together.

Now, having outrageously done away with the theme,
let us talk of the book itself.
Outside of the El Delator staff, the only people out there who can know what the past five months have been like are those who have written books. You should try it!
There are no "little people" to thank.
Everyone on the staff performed up and beyond the call of duty.

During my tenure, I have run up against adults who acted like children, children who acted like adults, egotistical seniors, overly-generous juniors and sophomores,
lazy people, hard workers, so-so people.
And an occasional fantastic person.
In short, I ran up against Cheltenham. And it was exciting.

With all of the above to work with, it was still great.
When I look at the book in June, the problems will melt away—leaving just a great yearbook.
But, enough of the Art Carunderizing.
I've said more than my due.

Before we part, I'd like to especially thank the following folks who worked like idiots:
Joel Pevar, Sandy Goodkin, Elaine Zimmerman and Peter Sichel.
Back then, I said "Good luck, world."
I forgot to add one thing.
"Good-bye."
